The Intelligenter.

How I Wandered in the Greenbrier. WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, Aug. 10.

Editors of the Intelligencer:
From Gauley Mountain, whence I wrote to you last, to the heart of the wrote to you last, to the heart of the fireenbrier, is not far in distance, but in fact it is a very great change. It is a total change of ideas; from coal, iron, salt and lumber, to beel. It is a change of scene too; from great views, butting hills, close ravines, dense foreats; to a broad expanse 12x80 miles of undulating hills set round by a background of blue mountains. A change of costume too; from bare feet or brogans to boots, from home-sput to broadcloth, from meal bags to paniers, from jute switches to the real thing. In fact, from a country which has always been utterly poor, but will be hugely rich, to one which has been well-to-do, and hopes soon to be so sgain. o do, and hopes soon to be so again.

THE SOCIETY

here is charming. After a good deal of travel I may sately say that I don't know any farming country in the old or new world which is so lovely. There is a breadth, a richness of texture, a changediness, and a joyousness about these andscapes which I never saw equalled u any country of productive capacity. THE CLIMATE is fine and bracing; a little too harsh for some people, owing to the stiff clay of which a great part of the subsoil consists, is skilled labor and association. Few women here can make really good butter, and few men have any really accurate knowledge of the handling of milch cat-tle. Moreover, association is a thing un-known to the Virginian intellect. There and damp at certain seasons of the year; but for healthy and sensibly-living peo ple it is admirable-hence, the lovely children one sees.

GEOLOGICALLY speaking, the district may be said to be There is subcarbonilerous and not much else; for though the western part of the section loes trench upon the lower seams of coal and the eastern part is comprised in the band the eastern part is comprised in the Devonian strata, yet the great mass, and famous part of those counties (Pocahontas, Greenbrier, Monroe, Summers) which compose what is called "the Greenbrier," is subcarboniferous. The limestones and clays of that epoch cover a very long and with section although not rear thick. clays of that epoch cover a very long and wide section, although not very thick, as they seem to have but a alight dip; and these are the strata, the strength, tertility and capacity for enduring bad farming of which, have made the Greenbrier so famous. As for mineral wealth, there are, as I have intimated, some nice seams of soft bituminous coal in the western part, most probably the same excellent cooking and blacksmiths coal which the New River Iron and Car Company is New River Iron and Car Company is this bluegrass, lime-stone, clay land. shipping with such acceptability under the name of Quimrimont Red Ash. There are some developments of nodular, and bay iron ores in the center of the district, which have not at present been found rich enough to account a present been found rich enough to account a present been found rich enough to account a working; there rich enough to encourage working: there rich enough to encourage working; there is a show of manganese, and some leaden looking sulphurets in the eastern mountains or Alleghany water-shed; there are the usual West Virginia cockand bull stories about silver, lead, &c.; and there are the great hematite and porsiliferous ore beds of Anttoony's Creek, which, will probably ere long; be supplemented by other discoveries of a similar nature.

reminds me a good deal of a school-fellow who used to sleep like a dormouse, and when awaked by the bell dinning in his cars would roll and twist, and with his eyes still closely shut, grunt out, "Orde, come — and—pull—me—out—o—led." They have superb land, fine climate, physical strength, market for every useful product they raise, plenty of brains—and yet their incessant cry is for some—and the triple of the product they raise, plenty of brains—and yet their incessant cry is for some—sand yet their incessant cry is for some—glass in the Greenbrier. But then you know that—
"Men have no faith in Gae-span sentiment," is their cry—forgetting in this lovely ig-norance of human nature that if the stranger does come in, it will be to make himself rich, not them; and that it may

Mr. H. has the reputation of being the most thorough farmer in Greenbrier. He has a 150 acre pasture farm, from which he obtained this year, 90 bushels of wheat, care to make much acquaintance, and (this crop was a failure,) 60 of clover seed, don't like the increasing dilapidation of 1,000 of oats, and 50 tons of timothy and clover. He summer-pastured 10 horses, 10 cows, 20 sheep, 7 calves, and 20 hogs. 1,000 of oats, and 50 tons of timothy and clover. He summer-pastured 10 horses, 10 cows, 20 sheep, 7 calves, and 20 hogs. He will winter upon this land and produce, with 525 bushels of corn from another farm, 80 calves, 60 sheep, and 12 horses. One winter he fed 40 sheep from December 1st to March 15th, on 420 galages of 625 the december 1st to March 15th, on 420 galages of 625 the december 1st to March 15th, on 420 galages. December 1st to March 16th, on 420 gallons of oats; they cost $3 50 each, and were sold April 16th, for $7. He does but little work on his farm himself, and keeps only one hired man, who requires help buildings are running down, the other to part of the free himse in winter he has no hand at all.

The only experienced Englishman in the Greenbrier, tells me that he bought a lot of cattle last December, stall fed them on have and Indian corn till early in April, on hav and Indian corn till early in April, on hay and Indian corn till early in April, and, whereas, he gave from $25 to $40 for them, he sold them for $60 to $100. His opinion is, that the cows of the Greenbrier would often be no disgrace to an English dairy farm, and butter can be transported for 3 cents per lb, and if really well made, can be sold in Washington at 60 cents.

In one or two important respects, however, the people are trying to get out of bed by themselves.

And now the good loks are making a dead heave to get one leg out of bed by establishing male and female high schools, and really they seem likely to succeed. There is one spirit here which more advasced communities might imitate with profit, and that is the social spirit. The Greenbrier people are eminently sociable and hospitable. He, and abstace is a way a glad to see and ahe too, is always glad to see a friend, or a stranger for that matter, and to ofter what they may have. Very good it often is, too; and, although the omnipresent hog curls his tail, or rather his fried middling, too often on the Greenbrier table, yet, after Fayette county, the fare is simply Parisian. They give parfare is simply Parisian. They give par-ties here with great liberality, and, in that harvesting is over, we look for a steady improvement in trade; conciry merchants, who, it is evident from the fact that they have been purchasing very sparingly ever aline the panic, will there is reason to expect an increased inquiry for
